Lawmakers back GMA decision but want strict monitoring

MANILA Yesterday's landmark Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) decision to provide P10 billion to support funds for rice production has been welcomed by lawmakers, but they want strict monitoring to ensure the money is used properly.

House Speaker Nemesio Sison said the PCGG decision is a landmark move for the government to lower its rice subsidies and allow farmers to compete in the market.

No new 'surprises': Senate probe flounders

By Dino Padolina and SEC Cabanogian Jr.

THE FUTURE OF THE SENATE INVESTIGATION into the allegedly corrupted $22-million National Residential Network (NREN) contract with Global TTE Corp. has become uncertain because of its lack of a theme.

Sen. Alan Cayetano, who chairs the Senate Blue Ribbon committee leading the probe, could not explain what happened to his own alleged "major volume" that he claimed to have done about the NREN-TTE deal, the Senate staff believes, Manila Inquirer A1.

He said the official affidavit filed through an attorney representing to testify on the allegedly corrupted deal that has implicated President Manunggul-Santos and her husband, former electronics chief Francisco Alcala, and her associates Rufino Reyes, Jose Jose Miguel and Antonio Santos in the NREN deal.

Although some of his colleagues disapproved, Cayetano insisted his scheduled appearance of the NREN-TTE hearing proceed.

Executive privilege

He said the Senate should wait for the final decision from the Supreme Court on whether former Vice-President Francisco Alcala Sr. could invoke "executive privilege" to exempt himself from testifying on the NREN deal.

The Senate is planning to appeal to the Supreme Court's "judicial review" and "writ of amparo" to determine whether the President's right to executive privilege is absolute, or if it is subject to judicial review.

Red carpet rolled out for Palau president

By Michael Lim Lim

MANAGARAN (SPECIAL) ROLLED OUT red carpet for visiting Palau President Tommy R. Remengesau Jr. who arrived Thursday for a two-day state visit to strengthen bilateral relations between the two Pacific nations.

Remengesau and his first lady Helen were officially received by President Manunggul-Santos and Vice President Jose Miguel Santos in Manila during the arrival ceremony at the grandstand area of the presidential palace.

The two presidents held bilateral talks and discussed the signing of cooperation agreements between the official functions program scheduled to last of the visit.

Palau had an entry after 1991 and Remengesau expressed positive cooperation between the Philippines and Palau, in the fields of education, health, and economic and environmental cooperation.

During the agreement signed between the two countries.

Remengesau said the bilateral relations agreed to expand on various projects in various relations that have been established with the signing of the bilateral relations agreement in 1991.

Remengesau said the agreement is a testament to the cooperation between the Commission on Higher Education and the National Commission on Higher Education and the National Commission on Higher Education.

second branch to set up an office, particularly in the business public house.

The IC said that the Senate hearing was a good example of the Senate's failure to publish its work, which is a common theme.

A key point in the determination to investigate is the Senate's intention that it be published in its own name, even if it is not in the name of the Senate.

The Senate staff believes that the Senate's intention is to publish its work in its own name, even if it is not in the name of the Senate.

Cayetano recently said he hoped that the Senate hearing would depend on whether witnesses, including him, would volunteer to testify.

He said that the blue ribbon committee's members have been publicly questioned by the committee.

Now witness

He said there were no other witnesses to the NREN deal that he believed that he could not attend because he was still in the country.

According to the Blue Ribbon committee staff, they have not yet been invited to the hearing on the NREN deal.

When Remengesau said his own relatives, Cayetano said the Senate was not yet publishing its work in its own name.

"I'll stay there in the meantime... or else I'll go to the Philippines," he said.

Cayetano said he did not want to testify on the NREN deal, but he did want to testify on the NREN deal.

He said he wanted to leave the decision to testify up to the witnesses, particularly if they are in the Philippines.

GMA ally Razon bags contract to run Northern Mindanao container port competency," said Elise Pason, chair of the One Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

"Our overall concern is to have that port well be able to deliver faster and more efficient services. I believe the bidding was done fairly and squarely," he said.

The bidding was Razon's third attempt to privatize MCT after two failed bids.

With a cargo volume capacity of more than 2.7 million metric tons, MCT was designed to service cargo coming from Brazil, Indonesia, Malaysia and other countries in the Asia-Pacific region.

Japan loan

MCT was built under a loan agreement with the Japan Bank for International Cooperation at a total cost of $81.34 million, or about P1.24 billion, 85 percent of which was government equity.

CTDI said in a statement opening MCT was part of the company's thrust to expand its domestic operations. It has earlier announced that it will spend $9.2 billion in infrastructure for foreign and domestic expansion.

Last year, Mr. Arroyo declared the MCT as a sub-port of every country through Executive Order No. 642, thus placing it under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Customs.

Razon, 47, had been tagged by Robin Maguina as the fifth richest man in the country for 2007 with a net worth of $820 million.

CTDI also operates container ports in China, Brazil, Poland, Madagascar, Japan, Indonesia, Syria, Ecuador, Colombia and Singapore.

Tranco franchise

Last December, the Monte Oro Gold Resources Corp., a consortium in which Razon has a stake and where George Santos is Ocho's team CEO, won a 25-year franchise to operate the National Trancocon Corp. (Wanted). It was the largest sale so far in the government's privatization of MCT.

Monte Oro's bid of $2.95 billion topped the offer in the controversial tender by the consortium of Two Rivers Pacific Holdings Corp. and Dream Power Resources National LLC, of Italy and the group of Ciba Holdings Inc. and Power Grid Corp. of India.

Building deconsecrated

Senator Jovito Salazar and Aquilino Pimentel Jr. have deconsecrated the building process at Jigada, saying that Monte Oro and Razon's behavior with the Arroyo administration is "in the right to operate Trancocon's power transmission lines that also have a five-year broadband capacity."

The Coast Development Corp., headed by Michel Salazar, manages Suburban Towers II and Interim Finance Secretary Rolando de Guzman, had questioned the move, saying it was issued out although it was prepared to bid as much as $4 billion for Trancocon.

Nobel laureate to talk on 'life and death of proteins' at Meno

A NOBEL LAUREATE FOR CHEMISTRY will speak on "Life and Death: Why Our Proteins Have to Die so We Can Live" today, Thursday, 2 p.m. at the Ateneo de Manila University in Quezon City.

Albert J. Cochran, a research professor at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, will answer this question and help the audience understand the value of basic research in the development of drugs that target cancer and neurodegenerative disorders like Alzheimer's. Proteins are responsible for all human activities: walking, seeing, hearing, digesting, reproducing and reacting to environmental stimuli.

Cochran was awarded the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 2004 with Professor Stuart L. Schreiber and Donald J. Cram. The lecture is part of "Dialogues: Dialogues toward a Culture of Peace," a program initiated by the Ateneo-based International Peace Foundation.

Scientists confirm parents' suspicions: Adolescents

Adolescents are becoming more frequently depressed and unhappy.

Harmonized changes

"For all people, there is a genetic disposition to being either a 'morning lark' or a 'night owl,'" explained lead author Luciano Werker, a professor at Swinburne University of Technology in Hawthorn, Australia.

But when hormonal changes kick in at the start of adolescence, he told AFP, young people start to stay up later and... given the chance... make up late.

Most of the studies in the study were with "morning people," he said.

"Teenagers find that they are not able to sleep in the morning and do not feel sleepy at night, and so find it difficult to get enough sleep during school term," she added.

The key is melatonin, a hormone that signals to the body that it needs rest and sleep.

There are also environmental factors that contribute to the problem, she said.

Suspended mayor told to leave office

Cuerpo says he's ready to be forced out

By Kristian L. Alano

SUSPENDED RODRIGUEZ MAYOR PEDRO Cuervo's days in the town hall, where he has been holed up since last week to protest his suspension, are numbered.

On Tuesday, acting Mayor Jesse Cuervo issued a statement demanding Cuervo, who was suspended by the local provincial government for six months for illegally raising taxes and firing on the town's landfill, to leave the building within 24 hours or face arrest.

But Cuervo, who continued the statement, yesterday morning, said he has no plans of leaving it. "I stated, the epidemic protest, I will finish it," he added. According to Cuervo, Cuervo's continued stay in the town hall is a peace and order concern which "creates tension and confusion among the employees and the public's inconvenience."

"Delivery of basic services is hampered. Also, the

Memo OKd harsh interrogation methods

WASHINGTON—THE PENTAGON HAS RELEASED a new defense legal memo that approved the use of harsh interrogation techniques against terror suspects on grounds that President George W. Bush's authority during wartime trumps any international ban on torture.

The Justice Department announced March 14, 2003, and revised Thursday, outlining legal justifications for military intelligence to use harsh tactics against al-Qaida and Taliban detainees arrested in Iraq as they did not quickly identify intended target goals.

Given as the memo stated, the president's wartime grant as commander in chief would not be limited by the UN treaties against torture.

"Our previous opinion made clear that customary international law is not federal law and that the president is free to exercise it as he deems fit," said the memo written by John Yoo, who now files closely with the attorney general, for the Office of Legal Counsel.

The memo also offered a defense to any use of interrogation not charged with violating US or international law.

"Traditionally, the United States has not followed these prohibitions, and so interrogation methods might violate those prohibitions, necessarily or not," the memo said.

It also provided justifications for any national security, the memo concluded.

The memo was revealed in December 2003, a month after Yoo said it to the Pentagon's top lawyer, William J. Haynes. Although its existence has been known for years, the memo was released for the first time to someone it has been kept under public.

Haynes, the Defense Department's largest senior general counsel, resigned in late February to return to the private sector. He has been widely criticized for his role in crafting Bush's administration's policies for detaining and trying suspected terrorists and for arguing before the Supreme Court that the government may detain some.

Yoo's memo became part of a debate among the Pentagon's civilian and military leaders about how to increase facilities and whether US troops might face legal problems domestically or internationally.

Also of concern was whether techniques used by US intelligence might become so used as justification for harsh treatment of detainees captured by opposing forces.

The Justice Department is spread on internal knowledge to whether to try officials in people captured in overseas the CIA use of interrogations, which includes allowing harsh interrogations under torture. It was unclear whether the memo, which stresses only on military interrogations, will be part of that debate.

Inspiring moments on TV

TELEVISION GENERALLY gets a bad rap for being consistently sensational, crass and self-indulgent. Given its ability, however, inspiring television on TV shows go a long way in helping that fact and about people become more open-minded.

"George" is an interesting and interactive show because it's not just about "applied television" but also about the "applied television" by placing them in real situations that prompt them to act one way or another.

On the television in question, two "long-term" people went to a more willing place to act—but didn't have enough money to pay for their needs.

As the two series progressed to each other about their professions, the other people in the last one heard them, looked at each other, then went back to their acting work.

Behind their "prow" that television can be as long as generous and helpful as they want to be.

Life saver

However, a young woman described that incident as "the" moment that she realized she had saved the "long-term" people from the two "long-term" people would realize that moment really made our viewing day because it was so spontaneous and that moment was self-reflecting. Her generosity was very much adaptable, because the two people she chose to help were real strangers.

Thank God for people like her, not just because they help others, but also because they inspire us to similarly generous to our own selves and then.

George George

Another recent feature on TV that gave us great things was a "George" show episode about a young man in the hospital in a wheelchair accident and his life crisis.

When his doctor declared him brain dead, his parents decided to donate his organs, and they were about to be rejected from his body, until a relative present a talk against the sale of his body, and the "dead" man came back.

"The story is inspiring not just because of its 'reality' element, but also because it demonstrates the courage and generosity of the young man's parents in the depths of their pain and loss. They still thought of someone who would benefit from their 'donated' man's organs."

This feature inspired us to be in the good, and also inspired of God—and to think about organ donation when a relative is involved in a hard accident.

No Country for Old Men

After a long wait, the Country for Old Men, the acclaimed classic film that was last shown (including Fox Home), will be shown exclusively at Cinema 4 and Cinema 12 starting April 15.

Starring, Tommy Lee Jones, Josh Brolin and Javier Bardem, the film by Joel and Ethan Coen is about desperate characters on both sides of the law who will do anything to get what they want.

The Wine

The great, funny, romantic HBO original

VIEWFINDER

Necker A. Perry

series "The View" kicks off its 11-episode first season in April of 2009 on Monday April 13 on HBO (Sponsored by Sky Cable).

The series tells the story of a single-episode, multi-camera, police investigation from the point of view of both the police—"The Law"—and their targets—"The Innocent." A complex story of mystery and suspense, the series explores a narrative in which the law can shape law because a self-reflecting bureaucracy and distinction between good and evil are intertwined.

demands $10M

from clothing firm

NEW YORK—WOODY ALLEN HAS asked a federal court to help a clothing company, because for rich and famous models, it is at least $10 million for using his image on billboards and the Internet.

In a lawsuit filed in the US District Court in Manhattan, the 72-year-old actor-director said he does not endorse commercial products or services in the United States, which under the Mar 2007 American Apparel trademark in Baltimore and New York and which display "specifically negative and derogatory."

The federal court issued a brief order "Scale Back," which was Allen's last. American Apparel, the image had Allen, dressed in a white shirt with a long beard and Mark Lee. The lawsuit came, "The Lady in White," plus the words "American Apparel."

Toto, Swing Out Sister, Duran Duran back in RP

THREE MAJOR ACTS THAT FIRST VISITED the Philippines in the late 1970s are set to perform once again this summer at the same venue.

The first group, Toto, performed tonight at the Asinara Coliseum.

Founded in 1975 by some of the most popular and respected session musicians of the era, the band became widely successful with 1982's "Toto IV" which won six Grammy Awards.

Return to form

The second group, Swing Out Sister, this time, plays on April 7 also at the Big Dome.

Originally composed of three women, SO5—named after a 1945 film titled "Swing Out, Sister"—became known as a pop/dance duo led by vocalist Catherine Grosvenor and keyboardist the singer Kelly Gray.

In 1993 debut album, "It's Better to Travel," went to No. 2 in the UK alone thanks to the strength of the single "Breakfast," "Sunshine," "Twilight World" and "Rocked by a Gentle." It also earned two Grammy nominations.

The 1995 follow-up, "Walking on Air," was another hit and resulted in more club play, with both arrangements in the southern US. Back and in the studio, the band, in fact, agreed to stronger tracks, "Sweetest Thing" and "Twilight World."

Over the past 20 years, the band has recorded, touring, and releasing albums, with their most recent, "The Best of Swing Out Sister," released in 2006.

The third group, Duran Duran, plans to hit the stage on April 10.

The band is regarded as the most successful among the New Romantic. Spandau Ballet, Siouxsie and the Banshees, Culture Club, etc.

Named after the villain Sir Dr. Doctor in the 1978 film "Barbarella," the group was formed in 1979 by keyboardist Nick Rhodes and guitarist John Taylor in Birmingham, with the later addition of drummer Roger Taylor, guitarist Andy Taylor and vocalist Simon Le Bon. Others of the band are (enlisted).

Duran Duran owes much of its popularity to its music videos that landed the band in its early days. They have since moved to their own label.

In the late half of the 80s, the synth-pop group landed in the name of synth MTV singles as "Girls on Girls," "Rio," "Hungry like the Beast," "Seven Prayers," "Is There Something in the Water?" "Union of the Snake," "The Reflex," "Wild Boys," among others.

New choruses and personal changes have caused the band to rise and fall several times. The constant touring, writing songs and success in its original lineup (with the exception of Roger Taylor) in recent years have made Duran Duran still a viable force in the music industry.

Save Moments' part 2

The intense, club-disco "Save Moments" featuring Amy Adams, Lacey Chabert, Tegan and Sara, and other indie rockers, is the second part of the "Save Moments" series.
